

Registration for Classes and Exams at the Chair of Comparative Politics

The registration for all classes offered by the Chair of Comparative Politics is done via FlexNow. However, you only register for exams and not for the classes themselves.

Consequently, you only have to register for a lecture if you intend to take the exam and earn credit points for it.

These are the deadlines you have to follow when registering for any exams at our chair:

	earliest registration-date	registration deadline	deregistration deadline lectures	01. April / 01. October	four weeks before the lecture period ends	four weeks before the lecture period ends seminars, advanced seminars, tutorials...	01. April / 01. October	beginning of the lecture period	two weeks after the lecture period started

The registration on FlexNow will be activated at 10am on the dates listed above.

If you do not cancel your registration until the deadline listed above and if you do not fulfill the requirements to pass the class, you will fail it meaning that you will have to repeat it. The number of times you can repeat a class is limited by the exam regulations.

If you are studying in a bachelors- or masters course, you have to repeat failed classes within the maximum study period. Since lectures are only offered every other semester, you are provided with the opportunity to re-take the exam at the beginning of the following semester.
